Jay grads have been part of playoff drive as members of Indiana University's marching band

By RAY COONEY
The Commercial Review

Aaron Funkhouser and Lilly Hedges were on the edge of their seats, along with all of the other band members in their cream and crimson uniforms with the interlocking "IU" stitched across their chests.

Could the Hoosiers actually do it? Would they be able to hold off the perennial powerhouse Ohio State for the Big Ten title?

"I'll never forget when we won that game," said Funkhouser. "Everyone was screaming, crying, hugging each other."

No musician joins the Marching Hundred expecting to witness any level of football success.

At least, that was the case for decades, including when Hedges and Funkhouser signed up after graduating from Jay County High School in 2022.

But all that has changed. Since the short trip north on Interstate 69 to Lucas Oil Stadium in Indianapolis for the Big Ten championship game, they have made much longer jaunts following the Hoosier gridders to the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, California, and the Peach Bowl in Atlanta for the College Football Playoff quarterfinal and semifinal games.

They fly to Miami today, starting a final memorable trip to support IU in the national championship game against the Miami Hurricanes at Hard Rock Stadium.

Growth of a program

Despite IU's historic lack of football success — just three winning records over a 28-year span — Funkhouser had an impression of what college football games at a Big Ten school would be like.

"I guess I had this vision that like they would be packed to walls with fans," he said. "And they weren't."

Biochar, feed mill receive approval

Board also OKs exception for building mini barns

By RAY COONEY
The Commercial Review

Three projects, including construction and operation of a biochar facility, received the nod from the county zoning board to move forward.

Jay County Board of Zoning Appeals approved special exceptions Thursday for the biochar facility and a feed mill at Minnich Poultry and a mini barn business for Chris Schwartz.

All three require special exceptions from the board because they do not fall under the guidelines of typical agricultural use.

The only request that received any public comment, either in writing or during Thursday's public hearing, was the biochar facility. It involves a process that Minnich officials say will reduce odor, pests and manure volume by turning manure into biochar, a charcoal-like soil additive.

John Hemmelgarn, Jay/Portland Building and Planning director, explained that his office had received questions about the Minnich facilities after they came up for tax abatements in May 2025.

He noted that there was discussion about a road use agreement, which would identify what roads are being used during the construction of the facilities and requirements for repairing them if there is any damage. Jay County Commissioners, after consulting the county highway department, recently decided a road use agreement is not necessary for the project.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Research Service defines biochar as black carbon produced from biomass sources for the purpose of transforming the biomass carbon into a more stable form. Marge Reier of Minnich Poultry noted that it can be used as a soil amendment product — something added to soil to improve how the soil works, not necessarily to "feed" the plant directly.

Reier explained that manure is one of the substances that can be used to make biochar. She said the process involves first drying manure to a point where it is dry enough to burn. It then goes through a second machine that involves extremely high temperatures, with the manure becoming fuel for the process. Through the process, the manure reduces in volume and becomes biochar, which Reier described as similar to charcoal but in powder form.

Minnich, which has been in operation since 1977 and has nearly 4 million laying hens and produces nearly 3 million eggs per day, is working with AgroNet Zero on the facility.

Carrier had loyal helper on route

The Commercial Review/Jennifer Dattoli

Ridgeville mail carrier John Valentine delivers his route with the assistance of "Baby." The long-haired chow mix, whose actual name was Tigger, had been walking Valentine's 10-mile delivery route with him for about 10 years.

Twenty-five years ago this week, a Ridgeville mail carrier was continuing his long-running tradition of delivering with a partner.

The Jan. 20, 2001, edition of The Commercial Review featured a story about rural Portland resident John Valentine delivering mail in Ridgeville alongside his canine sidekick "Baby."

Valentine recalled the day about a decade earlier when he encountered a frisky puppy while walking his route on Third Street.

"This little dog just came out and started following me," he said. "I reached down to pet her and said, 'How are you Baby?'"

From then on, the long-haired chow-mix — her actual name was Tigger — had been joining Valentine on his route. He walked 10 miles a day delivering, and she was with him nearly every step of the way.

"She's a lot of company," Valentine said.

The dynamic delivery duo handled its duties quietly until being featured in Women's World magazine in January 2001. The piece vaulted them to celebrity status, with passing drivers waving and honking, and some folks along the route leaving treats in their mailbox for "Baby."

"The whole town is kind of attached to her," said Ridgeville deputy clerk Shirley Page. "We think the world of that dog. We just love seeing her."

She was also a valuable defender, having warded off potential bites from not-so-friendly dogs along the route.

"She's protected me quite a few times," Valentine said. "She's saved me from getting bit at least three or four times."

The bond they shared was about more than a uniform. It was a person-to-pup connection.

"She won't go with anyone else, even if they bring extra treats for her," Valentine said, referencing substitute mail carriers and residents.

After their route each day, they would part ways, with "Baby" trotting home to rest and wait for her co-worker to return.

She said the two main goals of the facility — it would be located on the west side of the Minnich property off of county road 800 South — are to reduce flies and other pests that come with livestock and to reduce the volume of manure for easier transport.

Board member Kaleb Hemmelgarn asked about tax credits for carbon dioxide reduction. Steve Reier, Marge’s husband, said Minnich will pursue tax credits, if available, but that they are not the prime driver for the new facility.

Brian Link and Adam Muhlenkamp both had questions, with Muhlenkamp expressing concern about smell.

The Reiers responded that because of the extremely high temperatures there is no smell from the burning process. Any smell, they said, would come from the drying process. In order to mitigate that, the air is put through a wet scrubber and a biofilter. Marge Reier added that the facility will be monitored for air quality through Indiana Department of Environmental Management.

Muhlenkamp continued to express skepticism that there would not be an odor.

Link indicated that his questions were addressed during the Reiers’ presentation, but said he would have liked to have seen a sample of the end product.

Board members also had questions about noise, the source of the manure and truck traffic. The Reiers said there is not expected to be additional noise, that manure used in the process will come from on-site at the Minnich facility only and that it should lead to a reduction in traffic.

Board member Marla Lutes also asked about other such facilities in the state. The Reiers said they believe there is only one other in the Seymour area. (They visited that facility and one in Pennsylvania as part of their research process.)

Patti McLaughlin, assistant director of the building and planning department, noted that Minnich Poultry has received the necessary Indiana Department of Environmental Management permits and will have to follow state guidelines.

The board approved the special exception request on a 3-1 vote with Steve Ford, Angela Paxson and Hemmelgarn in favor while Lutes voted against.

Marge Reier noted that the new feed mill, to be located at the intersection of county roads 300 North and 800 East, would replace a current mill that is nearly 50 years old. (Its entrance would be on county road 800 East.) She said the project has been in the works for nearly 10 years. The new facility will grind and mix the same amount as the current mill — it would have a capacity of about 4,000 tons in an eight-hour shift — and will only be used for feeding Minnich Poultry layers and pullets.

The facility would include receiving bays and liquid and corn storage.

Answering questions from board members, the Reiers said truck traffic is not expected to increase. The project is expected to take 1.5 years to complete, with an estimated start date of this summer.

Schwartz requested an exception to allow him to construct and sell mini barns on his property at 7609 N. 500 West. He explained that he has been in construction for almost a decade and wants to work at home.

Hemmelgarn said Schwartz has enough acreage and a barn for construction. He suggested approval.

Board members clarified that Schwartz meets the required setbacks. They approved his special exception request unanimously.

In other business, the board:

- Re-elected Hilfiker as chair;
- Paxson as vice chair and Ford as secretary. Also appointed Patricia McLaughlin as recording secretary.

Today in history

In 1706, innovator Benjamin Franklin was born in Boston, Massachusetts. Known as one of the founding fathers of the United States, Franklin established Philadelphia’s second newspaper, “Pennsylvania Gazette” — it featured what is known as the first political cartoon, “Join, or Die,” in 1754 — as well as helped initiate a plethora of other institutions and public entities.

In 1893, the Hawaiian Kingdom was overthrown in a coup on Oahu, ending the reign of Queen Lili’uokalani.

In 1920, Prohibition began across the United States as enforcement of the Volstead Act took effect.

In 1922, actress Betty White was born in Oak Park, Illinois. With a career spanning nearly seven decades, White is best known for her comedic roles on television, which include “Rose Nylund” on “The Golden Girls” and “Sue Ann Nivens” on “The Mary Tyler Moore Show.”

In 1931, actor James Earl Jones was born in Arkabutla, Mississippi. The 2017 lifetime achievement Tony Award winner is best known for his deep voice used in stage, film and television roles.

In 1961, President Dwight D. Eisenhower delivered his farewell address and issued a warning about the “military-industrial complex.”

In 2014, Jay County boys basketball team fell 38-37 against host Connersville after Spartans junior Ty Miller hit a 3- pointer with 51.2 seconds left on the clock. JCHS senior Trey Teagle attempted a shot with three seconds left and just missed the mark.

Jay County High School graduate Lilly Hedges shows some enthusiasm while preparing to perform with the Marching Hundred at the Big Ten championship game at Lucas Oil Stadium in Indianapolis. She and fellow former Marching Patriot Aaron Funkhouser have also made trips to the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, California, and the Peach Bowl in Atlanta during the Hoosiers’ playoff run.

“I would see us get beaten by like 30, 40 points. I saw us going to quadruple overtime against Akron.

“And so my first two years in college, we always had this hope that we were gonna get better, but we always knew like it wasn’t gonna happen.”

Enter Curt Cignetti.

The coach who has done nothing but win everywhere he goes — Google him — made things better. The Hoosiers immediately went 11-2 in his first season, losing only to eventual national champion Ohio State in the regular season and in-state rival Notre Dame in the opening round of the College Football Playoff.

This year, it’s been perfection. IU avenged last season’s loss to the Buckeyes with a victory in the Big Ten championship game and has since throttled Alabama and Oregon in the College Football Playoff to set up Monday night’s clash with the 10th-ranked Hurricanes.

“People show up, which is awesome,” said Hedges, who plays alto saxophone. “And it’s really cool to see people showing up and believing and rooting and just being diehard fans. It’s a huge difference.

“And just going into game day more excited, like really wanting your team to win. I just feel like there’s so much more team spirit, more than I ever imagined ...”

Musical commitment

Being a part of the Marching Hundred, which dates back to 1896, goes well beyond the game-day commitment of playing and cheering at football games. It’s a semester-long grind.

The season typically starts with a 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. band camp. That’s before classes begin.

Then, it’s two hours of practice a day, four to five days a week.

The schedule spreads out a bit more late in the fall semester, but band members also had to contend with the Big Ten championship game coinciding with finals week.

“Everyone was stressed out to the max with balancing the Hundred and all of our other classes,” said Funkhouser. “So that was rough.”

Though the practice schedule thinned out a bit during the busier end of the fall semester, the Marching Hundred hit it hard after Christmas to prepare for their postseason trips. Those practices sometimes lasted six hours.

Road to Hard Rock

One of the perks of being a member of the Marching Hundred is getting to travel with the team throughout the postseason. Before 2024, that didn’t amount to much. Occasional bowl visits were to games named for restaurants (Outback), meat brands (Foster Farms) and clothing styles (Pinstripe). The Rose Bowl and Peach Bowl, those games are not.

This year’s trip to the Rose Bowl was the first for the Hoosiers since 1968 and their first win in “The Granddaddy of Them All.”

Simply being there was something special.

“Just the lore of the Rose Bowl is insane,” said Hedges. “So being able to actually go and experience that was amazing.”

Because of the enormity of the event, Indiana University brought back all of the living former directors of the Marching Hundred. During one of the practices, each of them got in front of the group and directed a song.

“It was so special because you could see it in their eyes how much this really meant to them,” said Funkhouser, who plays trombone.

Free time was limited in California, but he and some friends explored Chinatown on the one night they had off.

Both Hedges and Funkhouser mentioned their visit to Georgia Aquarium — it was the largest in the world when it opened in 2005 — as a favorite moment on their Peach Bowl trip. They also spent some time at the World of Coca-Cola.

“There’s little snippets of each trip that really stand out to me,” said Funkhouser of Redkey.

“I have fun all the time, but that trip was especially fun, getting to go to the aquarium. And always in this postseason, we get a lot more chance to interact with fans. ... That is another new highlight that I’ve really, really enjoyed about all of this.”

Hometown impact

Hedges and Funkhouser were seniors during former Jay County High School band director Kelly Smeltzer’s final year before his retirement.

“So happy for both of them,” said Smeltzer, who has visited Indiana University Memorial Stadium to watch his former students over the last several years. “Both outstanding students here at Jay County for us. I’m glad they had the opportunity to enjoy a great college experience. ...

They helped the Marching Patriots to third-place finishes at the Indiana State Fair during their freshman and sophomore seasons and then fourth place in 2021 following a year off because of the COVID-19 pandemic.

Both former Patriots credited their time with bands in Jay County for laying the groundwork that allowed them to become part of the Marching Hundred.

“I do want to say a special thank you to Mrs. (Jennifer) Crum, who was my sixth grade band teacher, and Mr. Smeltzer ... for getting me here. ... All that time, it led to this. I couldn’t have done it without them.”

“I would not be here if Kelly Smeltzer and the Jay County Marching Patriots hadn’t set such a solid foundation and my love for band, especially marching band,” said Hedges.

IU and after

Hedges and Funkhouser are members of Kappa Kappa Psi, an honorary fraternity. It promotes college bands, honors band members, stimulates campus leadership, seeks to foster relationships between college bands and works to provide a positive college experience for band members.

Both have had opportunities to travel during their college experiences.

For Hedges, a Portland resident it was by being part of Remote Area Medical, an organization that offers dental, vision and medical care for underserved communities. She traveled with a group to serve a community in Kentucky, volunteering at a free healthcare clinic.

Funkhouser spent time studying abroad in Europe. His trip overseas included a six-week stint as an intern for Two Chics Media to gain experience as he is a double major in interactive digital media and mathematics.

Hedges already has one foot out of college while the other continues to march with the Hundred, having graduated in December. She studied psychology pre-med but has decided not to attend medical school. Instead, she is taking a gap/growth year to save money and plans to pursue a doctor of psychology degree. She’d like to become a clinical neuropsychologist.

Funkhouser will graduate from IU in the spring. His current plans are to become a high school math teacher, though he’s not sure where he’d like to work.

Ready for a title

Hedges, Funkhouser and the rest of the Marching Hundred were slated to fly out of Indianapolis this morning.

Over the next few days, they’ll play various pep rallies and other performances and continue to practice for their role in the big game. They also plan to meet up with the University of Miami’s Frost Band of the Hour on Sunday.

The focus, though, is on 7:30 p.m. Monday night, when the Hoosiers will play the Hurricanes with the national championship on the line.

“I am looking forward to the game,” said Hedges. “I can’t wait for Indiana to be on this national level and I can’t wait to watch the game to support and ... just experience it all live.”

And if IU wins?

“I have no idea,” said Funkhouser. “Bloomington’s gonna go crazy. We’ve never won a national championship. Gonna be a lot of tears a lot of thank yous. It’s just gonna be such a serendipitous experience.”

It only takes this Italian bean soup about 15 minutes to come together. Flavored with garlic and onion, it also requires just a single saucepan.

Soup only needs on pot

By LINDA GASSENHEIMER
Tribune News Service

Enjoy a little taste of Italy to warm up a chilly January evening. This hearty soup comes together in just 15 minutes in a single saucepan. I added orecchiette. These are small, concave, disk-shaped pasta that beautifully capture the rich flavors of the broth.

The result is a comforting, satisfying vegetarian dinner.

Helpful hints

For quick preparation, buy diced fresh onion, carrot and celery in the produce section of the market.

Any type of short cut pasta such as penne can be used instead of orecchiette.

Northern white beans can be used instead of cannellini beans.

Countdown

Assemble ingredients.
Start soup.
While soup simmers, boil pasta in a separate pot.

Shopping list

To buy: one bunch celery, 1 container peeled carrots, 1 container reduced sodium vegetable broth,

Quick Fix

1 can reduced sodium cannellini beans, 1 can reduced sodium plum tomatoes, 1 container orecchiette pasta and 1 small piece Parmesan cheese.

Staples: olive oil, onion, garlic, salt and black peppercorns.

Italian Bean Soup

1 tablespoon olive oil
1 cup diced onion
1/2 cup diced carrots
1/2 cup diced celery
2 large crushed garlic cloves
1 1/2 cups reduced sodium vegetable broth
2 cups rinsed and drained cannellini beans
1 cup canned reduced sodium plum tomatoes
Salt and pepper
3/4 cup orecchiette pasta
2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese

Heat olive oil in a large saucepan over medium high heat. Add the onion, carrots, celery and garlic. Saute until vegetables are soft, about 5 minutes, stirring often. Add broth, beans and tomatoes. Break up tomatoes with the edge of a spoon. Bring to a simmer, lower heat to medium and cover pan with a lid. Simmer 5 minutes. While soup cooks, bring a large pot 3/4 full of water to a boil and add the pasta. Boil 8 minutes or according to package instructions. Drain. When soup is ready, add the pasta and simmer 3 minutes. Ladle warm soup into two soup bowls. Add salt and pepper to taste. Stir to combine ingredients in bowl. Sprinkle Parmesan cheese on top.

Playground presence raises some questions

DEAR ABBY: To help out his parents, I pick up my grandson from day care two days a week. I recently started taking him to a local park for about 45 minutes before I take him home. I'm physically active and climb the slides, chase him around and play with him. He loves our time together.

Over the last two weeks, there has been a little 6-year-old girl at the park who seems to be on her own. Her parents, I assume, are in the parking lot. They are not in the park play area.

The time we are there is the same time school gets out, so I'm sure she goes there every day after school. She has attached herself to us and wants me to go down the slide with her, push her on the swings and chase her constantly, and she asks me to watch her do this or that. Whatever we are doing, she is right there.

She is cute and sweet, but she is taking my time away from my grandson. Also, my grandson is annoyed at someone else demanding my time which also distracts me from keeping a close eye on him. There isn't another park we can go to that is nearby, and he loves this particular one. The girl is always there when we go. At first, I tried to include her in our play but that made it worse because she wanted more attention.

I am a retired teacher, so I understand she is craving attention from an adult, but she's really impeding on our play time together. How do I politely ask her to leave us alone? — DISTRACTED GRANDMA IN FLORIDA

DEAR GRANDMA: You are assuming that the little girl HAS a parent in the parking lot. The next time you see her, ask her who is there with her — mom, dad, aunt, caregiver? If you do, you can either meet the person and explain the problem or realize that no responsible adult is looking after her. If this is the case, for heaven's sake, report it to the school or CPS because leaving her all alone is child endangerment.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 66-year-old woman who has worked full time for 47 years, in addition to raising two children and maintaining a home. I will be retiring in three months because, honestly, I'm tired of the rat race.

I'm single and don't have a boyfriend. I have plenty of friends and family, but I'm increasingly nervous about what I'll do with my spare time. I know I should feel happy and grateful that I'm able to retire, but at the same time, I'm having anxiety over this freedom. Have you any suggestions to offer? — STOPPING SOON IN TEXAS

DEAR STOPPING: Start making a list of what your interests are. Your retirement years could offer you the chance to travel and see the wonders this country has to offer. You could take adult education classes at a nearby college or university. You might like to volunteer some time on projects or charities in your community. Or you could just hang out with friends. How you choose to spend your free time is entirely up to you and limited only by your imagination.

Project seeks to light up river path

To the editor:
The Jay County Trails Club is excited to share some wonderful news with our community.
Recently, the Portland City Council unanimously approved Jay County Trails to move forward with a lighting enhancement project along the RiverPath Trail.
Dedicated by the City of Portland in 2009, the RiverPath Trail is a paved, tree-lined pathway that follows the Salamonie River, connecting Meridian Street to Wayne Street, linking Hudson Family Park to Freedom Park and providing pedestrian access to downtown. For those unfamiliar with the area, the trail runs along the south side of the East Jay Elementary School parking lot and is used daily by students and residents alike.
Even so, the trail often goes unnoticed. It offers peaceful river views and glimpses of wildlife, yet its subtle presence has kept it from becoming the inviting space it could be. With simple, thoughtful string lighting, we believe this overlooked stretch can become something truly special — a place that feels safer, warmer and more inviting for everyone who uses it. As people enter Portland near the Arch Bridge, this new lighting will create a beautiful first impression. The soft glow along the river will warmly welcome residents and visitors alike, beautifully highlighting our RiverPath Trail.

Our vision includes the installation of black posts with overhead string lighting to gently illuminate the trail, creating a warm and inviting atmosphere that encourages people to walk and gather. Beyond improving safety, this lighting opens the pathway to new opportunities to enjoy and experience the trail in meaningful ways.
String lighting over the pathway creates space for evening walks, community events, and moments that bring people together. Many of us caught a glimpse of that magic last fall during Michelle Goldman's Bridge Dinner, when the lighting of the green bridge reminded us how powerful a thoughtfully designed space can be.
We are delighted to share that the Jay County Trails Club will cover the cost of materials for the lighting project, with funds already secured through The Portland Foundation. We are also looking forward to working collaboratively with the city street department to help with the installation to bring this vision to life.

As the project moves forward, we invite community members, schools and local businesses to join us in making this space beautiful. Opportunities will be available to contribute through donations, volunteer time, materials, services or helping with future enhancements like landscaping, benches and other beautification efforts. We hope that this becomes a project our entire community can take pride in.
If you would like to contribute now, please make donations to The Portland Foundation, with "Trails Club Riverwalk Project" listed in the memo line.
This initiative builds upon the city's investment in our trail system and reflects a shared desire to create spaces that strengthen connection, safety, and quality of life in Portland. We are grateful for the mayor and city council's support and excited to work alongside our community as we move ahead. This lighting project will bring more visibility, safety and beauty to one of our community's outdoor spaces. Evening strolls will feel warmer and more welcoming, and the trail will better connect our parks, neighborhoods and downtown.

This is the first chapter of a much bigger vision — and we're just getting started.
Stay tuned. We'll be sharing how you can be part of bringing this project to life
Sincerely,
Jenny Bricker
On behalf of the Jay County Trails Club

Stories are both inspiring, chilling

By TANIA NAVARRO
The San Diego Union-Tribune
Tribune News Service

It's not easy to talk about what is happening in Venezuela, especially when you are not Venezuelan and have neither lived nor worked in the country.
But as a journalist, I have spent years listening to Venezuelans tell their stories. While living in Utah, I even shared a house with someone from Barquisimeto, Venezuela's musical capital.
From friends, sources and neighbors, I learned about a country rich in culture and warmth — a place that once was a paradise, but whose complicated and painful history has led to the crisis we see today.
During my first year as a journalist in San Diego, in 2008, I learned a phrase that Venezuelans say with a smile: "Where there are Venezuelans, there will be bulla." Bulla means noise — laughter, music, life. Two years later, at the Salt Lake City farmers market, I tried tequeños for the first time and fell in love with the crunchy cheese-filled snack that has since become a symbol of home for many in the diaspora.
Those moments may seem small, even joyful. But they contrast sharply with the stories I have heard in recent years.
In 2023, while reporting outside a migrant shelter in Tijuana, I met Robert Connell. He was one of many Venezuelans on the move — first displaced to Peru, then Ecuador, and eventually forced to walk north with a migrant caravan to reach the Mexico-U.S. border. He arrived just in time to request an interview through the now-defunct CBP One app.
As a journalist, I wasn't allowed inside the shelter, so I spoke with migrants outside. Connell's story stopped me. He was a little older than me and had worked as an emergency medical technician and first responder for a local government in Venezuela.
Ironically, this proximity to power was his only way out: While the regime typically uses document retention to control its employees, his specific status allowed him to bypass the very repression that keeps others trapped. One night, with passports in hand, he escaped with his wife and two kids, including a newborn baby.
What he told me still gives me chills.

Tania Navarro

He spoke of hunger so widespread it reshaped daily life. Of the impossibility of finding food, medicine or basic supplies. Of why Venezuela was no place to raise a child. He described toddlers climbing trees to pick mangoes because there was nothing else to eat. Children digging through trash. Teenagers willing to trade their bodies for a piece of chicken.
Connell was prepared. He had skills, experience and determination. Even so, his journey was brutal and uncertain. The last time we spoke, he was in Chicago, having successfully entered the United States after his interview at the San Ysidro Port of Entry. I haven't heard from him since.
But I thought of him — and of the many Venezuelans I've met over the years — when news broke that dictator Nicolás Maduro had been apprehended on Jan. 3. I also thought of those who never made it out, those who died as a result of a brutal and inhumane regime.
What worries me now is what comes next.
Instead of extending a meaningful lifeline to people who are still resisting inside Venezuela — or those who were forced to flee — we are once again hearing rhetoric about mass deportations. A Trump administration eager to remove Venezuelan migrants ignores the reality that many of them are not economic opportunists but survivors.
Venezuelans did not leave their country lightly. They left because staying meant hunger, violence and hopelessness. If there is anything I have learned from years of listening, it is this: Where there are Venezuelans, there is bulla — but also resilience. The question is whether we are willing to listen to their stories, or whether we will choose to silence them by sending them back.

Braun had a lonely night

By JOHN KRULL
TheStatehouseFile.com

Normally, after a Hoosier governor finishes a State of the State Address, the hallway outside the chamber of the Indiana House of Representatives is clogged with people.
Supporters linger to share the good feeling of a big event for their team and to try to reinforce the speech's message. Opponents dawdle because they're seeking chances to reshape the narrative or offer a critique.
And some loiter just because they want attention and surfing the wave generated by the biggest speech a governor gives all year can make that happen.
This year, though, minutes after Indiana Gov. Mike Braun finished his second State of the State, the hall outside the House chamber was almost empty.
A few protestors holding hand-made signs and shouting incomprehensible chants clustered outside the doors, but few others remained.
It was as if someone pulled a fire alarm and the building vacated.
The why of this is easy to determine.
The best thing that can be said about Braun's speech is that it was short — a listless 22-minute address that was short on substance and long on self-congratulatory gestures, many of them either selective or spurious.
Effective State of the State speeches summon citizens to do great things. They are calls to action, the blare of a bugle designed to fire the spirits of lawmakers and the people they represent to meet looming challenges.
Braun's address, though, had all the lift of a week-old grocery list.
It was a tired and tiresome offering, one that lacked a coherent theme, message or agenda for the state. About the only interest it generated came from watching to see if Braun would dislocate a shoulder patting himself on the back.

He made it sound as if Indiana were an economic paradise, rather than a state where per capita household income has lagged for decades. He said that Indiana was doing great and that Hoosiers were doing great.
It was a curious approach for a governor with public approval ratings rivaled only by nasty communicable diseases.
Reputable sources within the GOP have told me that their polls have found that Braun, a Republican serving in one of the reddest states in the country, recorded only a 24% approval rating. Worse, a recent poll commissioned in Braun's home country, Dubois County, found that he had only 16% support.
The return of the bubonic plague would poll better than that.
Given this evidence of a lack of confidence in the governor's leadership, it might have made sense for Braun to make use of the moment and confront the problem. He could have said that he had heard the voters and would rededicate himself and his administration to addressing their concerns.
Instead, the governor said, in effect, that those concerns were all in the heads of the citizenry, delusions that they should ignore.
To bolster this thesis, he offered arguments about wage growth contradicted by data reported by reputable sources and supported only by isolated outliers. He applauded the work of the Indiana State Police and the Indiana National Guard and all but demanded that his listeners leave their seats to offer perfunctory and tepid standing ovations.

He roamed the countryside looking for good things that had happened on his watch to tout. He stopped just short of taking credit for the sun's rise every morning and the glistening beauty of the season's first snowfall.
To be fair, Braun came to the moment facing huge political challenges.
Thanks to the semi-special session the governor called in December to try to ram through President Donald Trump's ill-advised gerrymandering scheme, Braun faces an Indiana General Assembly that is at best indifferent and at worst hostile to his leadership. It cannot be fun to work in a building in which everyone is angry.
But other governors — Mitch Daniels comes to mind — have seen such moments as an opportunity to lead, not a reason to tread water.
Effective governors have two or three big goals they want to achieve, grand policy objectives they tout whenever and wherever anyone will listen.
As Mike Braun enters the second year of his governorship, reasonable people still wonder why he wanted to occupy the state's most prominent office — what he wants to accomplish with the power the state's people have granted him.
The reason the Statehouse was empty after Braun's State of the State is that this governor gave people no reason to stick around.

Opening lead — king of diamonds.

It is a fundamental principle of declarer play that if a contract can be made only when the adverse cards are divided in a specific way, declarer must assume that they are divided that way.

For example, consider this deal where declarer made a slam even though East had two seemingly sure trump tricks.

South ruffed the diamond lead and played a heart to the king, on which West showed out. Declarer’s only chance to avoid two trump losers now was to find a way to endplay East. This could not be achieved unless East had the appropriate distribution for the projected end position to be reached.

South therefore had to assume that East would follow to the A-K-Q of spades and A-K of clubs as they were cashed, since otherwise the situation was hopeless. He also had to assume East had precisely four diamonds, as there was no distribution that East could have, except 3-4-4-2, that would allow the slam to be made.

So, at trick three, South cashed the ace of diamonds, discarding a club, and then ruffed a diamond. This was followed by the A-K-Q of spades and another diamond ruff. Next, he cashed the A-K of clubs, producing this position with the lead in dummy:

North
♥ A 8
♦ 9

West Immaterial South
♥ 10 9
♠ 10

When the diamond nine was now led, East was helpless whether he ruffed high or low. Whatever he did, South would win two of the last three tricks.

Opening lead — ten of diamonds.

Nearly all the attention to the U.S. victory over Italy in the 2003 world championship was focused on the last two deals, which saw the U.S. overcome a 21-IMP deficit to win by 1 IMP.

But another deal that made a critical difference in the outcome occurred earlier in the 128-board match. Italy’s Norberto Bocchi and Giorgio Duboin held the North-South cards in the auction shown. North’s two-club response was artificial, after which a series of relay bids ended with North-South in six spades redoubled.

Bob Hamman, West, led a diamond, the suit his partner had doubled. Duboin put up dummy’s ace, led a heart to the ace and played a second heart, planning to ruff a third round of hearts in dummy, if necessary, and so make the slam.

Hamman won the heart with the jack and, knowing what Duboin did not know — that the trumps were divided 4-0 — cleverly continued with the king of hearts. Duboin ruffed with dummy’s jack to forestall a potential overruff by East and then cashed the ace, discovering that he now had to lose a trick to Hamman’s ten for down one.

Had Duboin cashed the ace or jack of spades before starting to play the hearts, he would have uncovered the trump situation and then easily made the slam.

At the other table, the U.S. North-South pair stopped in four spades, making five, to give the U.S. a pickup of 12 IMPs. Had Duboin played a high trump from dummy at trick two, however, Italy would have gained 15 IMPs on the deal and won the world title by 26.

Tomorrow: Abnormal procedure.

Rout ...

Offensively, Hallie Schwieterman set the tone for Jay County. The junior provided 20 first-half points while orchestrating the Patriots' scorching start.

"She's talking to the girls and encouraging them and trying to get them in the right places, and just being a good floor leader like you want your point guard to be," McIntire said. "And she's doing a really nice job with that."

With the Patriots up by 29 points at the half, Hallie Schwieterman played sparingly after the intermission, finishing with 22 points. She passed the torch to her sister Karsyn Schwieterman, who continued to bolster Jay County's advantage with 15 of her game-high 24 points coming in the second half.

"I definitely didn't start off great, but as we went through the game, my teammates just were picking me up and helping me gain my confidence back," Karsyn Schwieterman said.

Karsyn Schwieterman wasn't the only Patriot to step up in Hallie Schwieterman's absence. A total of nine different Jay County players entered the scoring column, including all five starters and four bench players.

"I'm so proud of them to be able to step on the court and do a good job, and keep that lead and handle the ball well," Hallie Schwieterman said. "And I'm just happy that we get the opportunity that I can go sit down on the bench the second half and not have to worry that they're going to get back in the game."

The reserves kept up the defensive intensity as well, as Southern Wells finished the game with 35 turnovers.

"We played man-to-man defense tonight, and we thought we could just get up and pressure their ball-handlers and get some turnovers," McIntire said. "And I think Hallie ended up, we had her for nine steals, and Karsyn's up there, Raylah (Newton), and really all of our guards are up there putting a lot of pressure on the ball, and I just thought we were all effective with that tonight."

Jay County's semifinal victory continued the team's dominant run through the ACAC tournament, as the Patriots have now won their two tournament games by an average of 39.5 points. Jay County also seized control of both matchups early on, outscoring its opponents a combined 44-10 in the first quarter.

After having their streak of four straight ACAC tournament titles snapped last season, the Patriots are on a mission to reclaim their place as the conference's premier program.

"We're ready to go to the championship," Hallie Schwieterman said. "I mean, especially with losing last year, I think people got the idea that maybe we weren't as good as we have been in the past, but I think we're as good, if not better, and I think that this year's gonna be a great year for us, and we're all out for blood. We lost our streak last year, and this year we're just going to start right back up again."

The Commercial Review/Ethan Oskroba

Kendall Schemenaur of the Jay County High School girls basketball team attempts a layup during the Patriots' 77-28 victory over the Southern Wells Raiders in the semifinals of the Allen County Athletic Conference tournament on Friday. Schemenaur was part of a bench unit that chipped in 12 points as the Patriots advanced to face Bluffton in the ACAC tournament championship game on Saturday.

Flourish ...

"(She) won the first one in the morning, won the last one in the evening, and in between, it's going to be a blur for her and for us, but we're happy that she goes home 2-2. That's super awesome."

Rowles' final placing came down to another battle against No. 6 Delgado (21-9), who she lost to in overtime in last season's regional semifinal. She didn't allow it to last long.

When Delgado took a shot, Rowles sprawled. She avoided the takedown attempt and instead slapped a headlock on her rival. She worked it to a pinning position, finishing the match in just 40 seconds.

"When the shot came, I got my feet back," said Rowles, who plans to wrestle in college at Indiana Tech. "And I love to rip 'em from there, nice little headlocks. That's what I did."

Rowles had a strong start to her day, scoring eight points before unranked Annalise Sanchez of New Haven got on the board with an escape 30 seconds into the second period. Sanchez (20-7) closed the gap to 8-4 before Rowles ran off the next 13 in a row, including two near falls, for a 21-4 technical fall victory.

The dream of a state championship came to an end in the quarterfinal round, as Rowles was unable to find any traction against Hobart's fourth-ranked Joanna Cantu (36-5). Rowles first chased a single-leg takedown at the 1:30 mark of the first period but was unable to finish it, with Cantu eventually slipping behind her for a takedown.

The Commercial Review/Ray Cooney

Katie Rowles of Jay County gets a hand to the face while trying to hold down Aniah Delgado of Perry Meridian for a pin in their seventh-place match at 100 pounds during Friday's state finals. Rowles scored the pin in 40 seconds to finish her career with a victory.

The same pattern happened in the second and third periods as Cantu defeated Rowles 9-2.

"She hit angles to get the initial set up to finish the takedown, go behind, and the length of the Cantu girl from Hobart just was able to get her to square up on Katie," said Jacks. "The length, I think, was our downfall there."

"And Katie kept going back to the drawing board ... She had three different types of shots, and they all ended in Cantu getting a takedown. But I wouldn't ask her to do anything different. She's aggressive."

Rowles rematched with Roncalli's Claire May (32-2) in the consolation semifinals after upsetting the second-ranked wrestler in the state with a pin a week earlier in the regional semifinal. A repeat performance was not to be.

Though Rowles got on the board first with a headlock for a takedown midway through the second period, May responded with a reversal 17 seconds later. May chose the bottom position to start the third period. While Rowles attempted to work a half nelson for near-fall points or a pin, May slipped out again for a second reversal and a 4-3 lead.

Rowles fought for an escape in the closing seconds of the match and made it to her feet, but did not get the call to even the score as time expired.

"Just a hard, tough fight between two really good wrestlers," said Jacks. "Last week, that was Claire's first loss and Katie was one that gave it to her. We knew it was going to be close."

Undefeated and top-ranked Kaitlynn Fouty (27-0) of Whiteland won the 100-pound state title.

The seventh-place finish with the win over Delgado completed a career in which Rowles was a three-time state qualifier and two-time state medalist. She placed fourth at 100 pounds in 2025 and helped the Patriots win the inaugural IHSAA sectional title at Muncie Central as well.

"I wish we could have everybody work as hard as Katie does," said Jacks. "She started freshman year, no shoes, no time on the mat. She had gone to watch her brother Cody wrestle, but she didn't really experience any wrestling. And went to state that year ..."

"She just inspires the girls. ... She's always trying to build our program. ... So I'm going to miss her. For as small as she is, she casts a big shadow for us."

Tribe picks up second MAC win over Minster

MINSTER, Ohio — With a one-point deficit at half, the Indians' fourth conference game could have gone either way, but a strong second half helped them prevail.

The Fort Recovery High School boys basketball team pulled out a 63-51 victory over the Division VII No. 7 Minster Wildcats on Friday.

Minster got off to a 15-10 lead by the first quarter break, but the Tribe fought back to go into halftime trailing 25-24.

They took advantage of a strong third quarter, in which Hudson Overman scored six points while Breaker Jutte, Brody Barga and Grant Fortkamp each had four, to take a 5-point lead. Jutte and Overman went to work in the fourth period to secure the victory for Fort Recovery (8-4, 2-2 Midwest Athletic Conference). Jutte finished with a game-high 20 points, while

Local Roundup

Overman had 19. Barga also reached double figures with 12.

Cole McClurg was the leading scorer for the Wildcats (7-6, 0-4 MAC) with 17 points. Beck Stephey had 12 as well.

FR girls fell

FORT RECOVERY — Fort Recovery's girls bowling team fell 43 pins short of Memorial at Miracle Lanes on Friday in a 2,375-2,332 defeat.

Jadyn Wyerick put together the best day for the Indians (8-2) rolling games of 178 and 220 for a 398 series. Deanna Brown also broke the 200-pin mark in her first game with a 214. She followed with a 159 for a 373 series.

The only other Tribe bowler to roll two games was Lilah Thien, who had a 291 series.

Other individual game scores came from Lilliana Williams (139), Claire Gaerke (121), Malia Grisez (121) and Elizabeth Kahlig (114).

The Tribe edged out the Roughriders in the Baker series 775-764, but it wasn't enough to overcome a strong set of second games.

Roessner leads

FORT RECOVERY — The Fort Recovery boys bowling team failed to defend its home lanes as the Memorial Roughriders claimed a 2,946-2,683 victory over the Indians at Miracle Lanes on Friday.

The best day came from Anthony Roessner as games of 209 and 190 added up to a 399 series. Memorial had three bowlers roll better than Roessner with Will Ross leading the way at 478 pins.

Reece LeFevre and Gabe Acheson both threw a pair of games for Fort Recovery (9-2). Acheson's 202 helped him to a 381, while LeFevre had 363 pins.

Other individual scores came from Garrett Diller (196) and A.J. Siefring (158).

The Tribe couldn't keep up with the Roughriders in the Baker games either, falling 966-859.

Just missed

FORT WAYNE — Jay County's boys wrestling team lost a heartbreaker to the Homestead Spartans 40-39 on Thursday.

The Patriots (12-7) won six of the 12 contested matches with four pins, a tech fall and a major decision.

Jay County first got on the board with Jacob Robinson racking up a 23-7 lead on Christopher Saine for the tech fall 4 minutes, 29 seconds into the 157-pound match.

Caleb Sibray immediately followed with a 17-4 victory in the 165 contest over Brandon Pinkston.

Bryan Fields, Spencer Smitley, Alexander Rivers and Jason Landers all secured victories via fall.

Fields handled Caleb Grayless in the 175 match in 1:36. Smitley won the 285 weight class in 3:15. Rivers needed 1:13 to get the fall on Bryson Eng in the 126 match. Landers wrapped up the match against Nolan Mangan in the 138 contest, pinning the Spartan in 1:06 to leave JCHS one point short.

Tribe lost

FORT RECOVERY — The Fort Recovery High School girls basketball team couldn't keep up with the Division VI No. 6 Minster Wildcats in the first half as it fell 56-30 on Thursday.

The Indians (2-12, 0-5 MAC) gave up 33 points in the first two quarters, more than they scored the entire game, while only finding the hoop five times for 14 first-half points. They stayed closer in the second half only getting outscored 23-16.

Cameron Muhlenkamp led the Tribe with 14 points. She hit two shots in each of the final three periods, including a pair of threes in the fourth.

Makenna Huelskamp followed with six points, while Maddie Schoenlein and Ivy Tobe each had three and Emma Schmitz and Brynn Huntsman added two apiece.

FRHS was without starting guard Paisley Hart and only got one quarter out of Bridget Homan in the loss.

Josephine Hoying and Charlie Wolf both reached double figures for the Wildcats (13-3, 4-1 MAC). The former led with 15 points, while the latter added 12.

Ripped ...

The Patriots' defense continued to bother Southern Wells as the Raiders went 0-3 from the field in the second quarter while turning the ball over 10 times.

While Jay County turned the Raiders over 16 times in the first half (22 in the entire game), it took care of the rock on the other end of the floor. The Patriots didn't cough the ball up at all in the first quarter. They slipped up some in the second period, but came back out at half-time and only gave the ball away three more times for eight total turnovers.

"We were able to just calm down," said junior guard Brock Wasson. "Coming into halftime we had (five) turnovers and coach told us not to get to 10. We ended with (eight) so we were able to focus in and do it."

With a strong lead at the end of the first quarter, Rigby was able to extend his bench. Nick Snow, Samuel Wiggins, Jacob Monroe and Alex Miller got to play throughout the second, third and fourth quarters. They ended with a combined four points, 11 rebounds and one assist.

"Those are big minutes for those guys," said Rigby. "Not just for them, but for us to see what kind of situations they're comfortable in. It's one thing to see it in practice every-day, but it's another to actually get them out here with the fans and bigger moments and see how they respond. I thought they all did a really good job."

Jayden Comer led the Patriots in scoring as he dropped 18 points for the second consecutive game. He finished 8-of-13 from the field, while vacuuming in six rebounds and dishing out two assists.

The Commercial Review/Andrew Balko

JCHS also got a nice lift from Wasson off the bench. He ended with 11 points, which finished as the second most in the game and tied Jaxcon Casterline of Southern Wells.

Wasson found particular success from beyond the arc, hitting 3-of-4 triples.

"It definitely builds confidence," Wasson said. "Shooting from the 3-point line was rough last game, so it was nice to come out and knock them down. ... I was just going off my teammates screens and using their bodies to get me open."

Rigby's emphasis throughout practice this week has been to focus on what the Patriots do well. While there is still some work to do, he likes the direction his team is heading and will look to claim

Brock Wasson of the Jay County High School boys basketball team goes up for a reverse layup to avoid the block attempt of Southern Wells' Joshua Aulbach during Friday night's Allen County Athletic Conference tournament semifinal. Jay boys ripped Raiders in ACAC semifinal

By ANDREW BALKO
The Commercial Review
The Patriots walloped the Warriors in the opening round of the Allen County Athletic Conference tournament. Their semifinal opponent didn't post much of a threat either as the Patriots ripped the Raiders apart to clinch a spot in the final.

Jay County High School's boys basketball team ran away with a 60-19 victory over the Southern Wells Raiders in the ACAC tournament semifinal on Friday night.

The victory earned the Patriots (9-2) a trip to South Adams today to face the Heritage Patriots, who beat Bluffton 63-50 in the other semifinal, following the conclusion of the girls championship game.

The 41-point victory over Southern Wells (1-9) came three days after the Patriots beat Woodlan by 36. With the championship game looming on Saturday, Jay County could have overlooked the Raiders, but came out prepared to put the game away.

"I'm glad that one's over, that's the feeling I've got," said JCHS coach Tyler Rigby. "Honestly, that's a hard game to play in. I thought we responded really well early and started off where we left with Woodlan. We were mentally locked in and got off to the start that we really wanted.

"Sometimes, if you're not mentally locked into a game like that, it can go bad pretty quickly."

Jay County started the game on an 11-0 run that got broken up by Adam Aulbach on an off-balance runner with 3 minutes, 51 seconds remaining in the quarter. SWHS didn't score again in the period as the Patriots put up 11 more points to lead 22-2 at the quarter break with five players contributing offensively.

Final flourish
Rowles closes with victory for 7th

By RAY COONEY
The Commercial Review
INDIANAPOLIS — There were smiles after the opening round, sadness after the second and frustration following the third.

Ultimately, Katie Rowles felt the satisfaction of the referee's hand slapping the mat in her final match.

Rowles, a Jay County High School senior, became a two-time state medalist with her opening win Friday at the IHSAA Girls Wrestling State Finals and closed her career with another victory to finish in seventh place in the 100-pound weight class at Corteva Coliseum on the Indiana State Fairgrounds.

"I don't really think it's sunk in yet," said Rowles, who entered the postseason ranked seventh in the state. "It's just crazy to think that, for one, high school wrestling is over, and two, I finally got another win today.

"Today was a little rough. It's hard to come into the state tournament, especially your last go at the state tournament with big goals, and not let the pressure get to your head. And I don't really feel like I did. I think I wrestled my best ... It's nice to finally end it with a win."

Rowles (30-6) closed her career with a victory by pin over Aniah Delgado of Perry Meridian in the seventh-place match. She won her opening match of the day to secure a top-eight finish and a state medal before dropping her quarterfinal and consolation semifinal bouts.

Her effort earned 7.5 points for Jay County, placing it in 64th out of 121 teams represented in the state tournament.

Whiteland scored 99.9 points to win the team title ahead of runner-up Crown Point (78.5), with undefeated and top-ranked Kaitlynn Fouty (27-0) of taking the 100-pound state title to lead the way.

"Ups and downs like crazy, because ... she wrestled hard every match and a couple of times we didn't get her hand raised," said JCHS coach Troy Jacks. "But on any other given day, she did enough, had enough effort and enough skill to win those matches.

Jay County High School senior Katie Rowles gets a hug from coach Troy Jacks after pinning Aniah Delgado of Perry Meridian to win her seventh-place match in the 100-pound bracket Friday during the IHSAA Girls Wrestling State Finals at Corteva Coliseum on the Indiana State Fairgrounds in Indianapolis. Rowles finished her career as a two-time state medalist after placing fourth at 100 pounds last season.

Patriots roll to title game

Jay County turned in dominant effort vs. the Raiders

By ETHAN OSKROBA
The Commercial Review

The Patriots haven't lost back-to-back Allen County Athletic Conference tournaments since 2013 and 2014.

If Friday's performance is any indication, they're intent on keeping it that way.

The Jay County High School girls basketball team dismantled the visiting Southern Wells Raiders 77-28 in the ACAC tournament semifinal.

The Patriots will face Bluffton in the championship game on Saturday at 6 p.m. at South Adams High School.

"Glad to see that we're moving on, getting an opportunity to play in the championship game of the ACAC," said Jay County coach Sherri McIntire. "I thought we probably came and went a little bit in that game. I thought we coasted a little bit ... But at the end of the day, we're moving on, getting to play in a championship, so very pleased."

Jay County (12-5) didn't take long to assert its will on Friday night, blasting the Raiders (11-6) with a 13-0 opening run in the first two and a half minutes of play. The Patriot advantage ballooned to 27-8 at the end of the opening quarter as the team romped to a 49-point first half.

Turning defense into offense was a central theme for the Patriots, who generated a plethora of transition baskets by causing 21 first-half turnovers.

"Our defenses are key," McIntire said. "If we can get out and get some turnovers and get the ball out in transition and get some of those transition baskets, I feel like that just gets us going, gets our energy where it needs to be and that's where we're best."
