Ohio man dies after crash

An Ohio man died this morning as the result of a vehicle collision in Jay County.

Joshua D. Highley, 40, Coldwater, Ohio, was pronounced dead at the scene of the incident on Indiana 67 in northeast Jay County.

Greg Smith, a truck driver for Jacobs Enterprise of Rushville, was driving a semi east on Indiana 67 near county road 350 East about 5:30 a.m. today when a westbound van driven by Highley crossed the center line and crashed into the semi, according to Jay County Sheriff's Office chief deputy Ben Schwartz. The van subsequently caught fire.

After emergency personnel arrived, Highley was pronounced dead at the scene.

Jay County coroner Michael Brewster said an autopsy will be conducted tomorrow.

Smith was transported to IU Health Jay for examination but displayed no external injuries.

Lawmakers push back special session

By CASEY SMITH
Indiana Capital Chronicle
indianacapitalchronicle.com

Indiana lawmakers announced Wednesday they will delay a reconvening of the General Assembly until late July, pushing back the governor's proposed tax refund payments and allowing legislators more time to craft an expected plan to further restrict access to abortions.

Republican leadership in the House and Senate said state lawmakers plan to return to the Statehouse for a special legislative session on July 25, rather than previously scheduled on July 6.

House Speaker Todd Huston and Senate President Pro Tem

Rodric Bray said in a joint statement that in light of the U.S. Supreme Court decision that overturned the landmark Roe v. Wade and Planned Parenthood v. Casey rulings, legislative leaders are now anticipating a multi-week special session, rather than a one- or two-day meeting.

Bray and Huston said they worked with the governor to push back the start date to "minimize logistical issues."

The Republican leaders said the General Assembly will consider both the tax refund proposal and "action to further protect life, and support new and expectant mothers" once they reconvene. Bray and Huston have signaled support for new restrictions — possibly even an outright ban on abortions — but lack details.

They additionally promised to vet bills "through the full legislative process," including holding committee hearings and allowing public testimony.

"The Indiana GOP are scared because they've seen the protests and have heard from Hoosier women. They are waiting for the dust to settle before they push their extreme agenda that includes a total ban on abortions — even in cases of rape and incest," said Lauren Ganapini, executive director of the Indiana Democratic Party. "Only 17% of Hoosiers support this extreme policy, and Democrats are ready to hold them accountable for trying to throw Indiana back to the 1950s."

Refund delayed

Republican Gov. Eric Holcomb announced his plan earlier this month to dip into the state's growing budget surplus and send $225 in payments to taxpayers to provide inflation relief. To do so requires approval from the state legislature. He initially wanted that done by July 4.

Hoosier taxpayers began receiving $125 payments last month under Indiana's automatic taxpayer refund law. If lawmakers approve his new plan, Holcomb said each eligible state resident would receive a combined total of about $350 in payments, with a married couple filing jointly receiving about $700.

But lawmakers only have until Aug. 14 to codify their plans. The special session will still technically begin on July 6 — as outlined in the governor's proclamation. Once that clock begins ticking down, state law allows legislators to use up to 40 calendar days to complete their work.

The delay could mean taxpayers won't see refund checks for several more months.

Town-oriented transition Kaups chose Smith to take over long-running FR shop

By BAILEY CLINE
The Commercial Review

FORT RECOVERY — Before retiring after more than 39 years, Tess and Tom Kaup wanted to find a good fit for their floral and print shop.

That's why they chose Jenni Smith, the owner of Be You Boutique.

"We thought with her boutique and with her enthusiasm ... we thought it was a good fit," explained Tom Kaup. "We wanted somebody energetic ... they had to be town-focused. Town-oriented."

Smith is combining her business, which offers retail and personalized items, with Forget-Me-Not Florist and Purple Post, which has been owned by the Kaups for nearly four decades. The ownership change is set for Friday, with Smith planning to close the shop for 10 days as she makes the transition. (Forget-Me-Not will still be accepting calls for flower orders.)

Then, starting July 11, Forget-Me-Not Florist, Purple Post and Be You Boutique will be operating out of the same facility at 101 S Wayne St., Fort Recovery.

"I think this will fit in well down there, it'll just expand what we offer in the one space," Smith said. "It'll give me more room to grow."

Be You Boutique has been operating out of the back of Lifestyles Beauty salon since November 2018. The boutique offers children's clothing and accessories as well as personalized gifts. Smith's line-up has expanded in the last year, now including baby gifts and clothing and toddler items.

Purple Post sells custom t-shirts and other personalized wear. Along with floral arrangements, Forget-Me-Not Florist also offers home decor and gifts. Smith noted her boutique has similar retail and personalization options, making it an easier transition because her family and staff are familiar with a majority of the business.

"I think it'll be a good fit," said Smith, who has been training with the Kaups for about a week. See Transition page 2

In 1520, an Aztec revolt expelled Spanish conquistadors from Tenochtitlan during "La Noche Triste." Aztec emperor Moctezuma II died in the incident.

In 2003, Redkey Town Council agreed to close portions of Oak and Central streets to help facilitate changes to the Norfolk Southern Railway Company tracks through town. (The former Carr tomato canning factory was also set for demolition.)

In 2015, Jay County Fair Board announced the postponement of Trace Adkins' scheduled concert at the Jay County Fair because of wet conditions in the grandstand area. Tess and Tom Kaup opened the floral shop May 5, 1984. (They got their start after Tom's brother, Jerry, and wife Lori Kaup opened Kaup's Pharmacy across the street.) Tom also worked as a mail carrier for United State Postal Service throughout his career, delivering mail in the morning and helping with the shop in the afternoon and evening. He retired from the postal service in the fall.

The couple decided earlier this year to move on from their businesses. Prior to an interview Wednesday, visitors streamed in and out of the floral shop storefront, congratulating Tess and Tom on their retirement. A 1999 graduate of Fort Recovery High School, Smith received her associate's degree in occupational therapy from Cincinnati State Technical and Community College, where she met her husband, Tim. She returned with her family to Fort Recovery in 2008.

Smith worked in the medical field for 18 years, serving as an occupational therapy assistant for Community Sports and Therapy in Coldwater and Comprehensive Home Health in Greenville. Prior to owning a boutique, Smith helped with work at her parents' store in Portland — it was previously a Montgomery Ward before stores closed in the early 2000s — and her father's Portland store, Mike's Rent-All.

Hours for the boutique, floral and print shop are from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Mondays through Fridays and 9 a.m. through 3 p.m. Saturdays. The shop will be closed Sundays.

Tom and Tess Kaup have no big plans in retirement, simply looking forward to spending more time with their children, Hannah, 26, and Spencer, 21.

"We're moving on to new adventures," Tess Kaup said. "We're feeling pretty confident that it's going to be in good hands."

"We've been here a long time," added Tom Kaup, noting they are both 65 years old. "It's time to turn the reins over."

Court: Biden can end policy

By DAVID G. SAVAGE
Los Angeles Times
Tribune News Service

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court on Thursday upheld President Joe Biden's broad power to enforce the immigration laws, ruling he may repeal the Trump-era "remain in Mexico" policy that barred most Central American migrants from entering the United States to seek asylum.

The 5-4 decision in Biden vs. Texas reversed lower court rulings which held the Democratic administration must continue President Donald Trump's strict border enforcement policy.

Chief Justice John G. Roberts Jr. wrote the majority opinion, joined by fellow conservative Justice Brett M. Kavanaugh and the courts three liberals, Justices Stephen Breyer, Sonia Sotomayor and Elena Kagan.

Roberts said the law allowed the administration to return asylum seekers to Mexico, but did not require it to do so.

Any new abortion laws could take effect as soon as the General Assembly closes out the special session, however.

Holcomb previously rejected calls from Democrats to suspend state gas taxes, saying that would be an inefficient way to help Hoosiers financially. On abortion, the governor doubled last week that he is "pro-life," and that he expects lawmakers to "make progress in protecting the sanctity of life."

State adopts a new civics course

By CASEY SMITH
Indiana Capital Chronicle
indianacapitalchronicle.com

A new middle school civics class was approved by the Indiana State Board of Education one year after state lawmakers required the government and citizenship standards to be taught to younger students.

The civics class will be taught during the second semester of sixth grade, primarily covering the foundations and function of government, as well as the role of citizens. That includes topics such as the English Bill of Rights, the principles and purposes of government, and civic responsibility. Student discussions will further center around the three branches of government, elections and property taxes.

The civics course aims to provide students with an initial foundation of civics education — some of the topics taught will be covered again during students' senior year government class.

Certain sixth-grade geography standards — including instruction on continents, oceans and hemispheres — will be pushed back to seventh and eighth grade.

Middle school students will be required to take the one-semester civics course before starting high school. The new standards go into effect for the 2023-2024 school year.

Abusive husband tries to manipulate wife

DEAR ABBY: I am the mother of two small children. I have separated from their verbally abusive, alcoholic father. I returned to my grandmother, who raised me, and tried to get a job. I couldn't find one quickly because we went into quarantine and my uncles made me move out.

I currently live in a women's shelter with my children, and I finally got a job. My problem is my husband still acts like we are getting back together, and he's embarrassed that we are living here. I want a divorce, but he won't talk about it, and threatens not to send money to support me and the children. He doesn't send much, but I have enough gas to get everywhere during the week.

Dear Abby

He keeps telling me how much money he makes now and that he can get us a nice place where he is, or he can come stay a whole week with us when he's off. I don't want him to come stay with us. When I tell him this, he gets angry and hangs up, but then calls back the next day to say the same thing. I can't get him to understand that I don't want to be with him anymore, and I'm tired of his abuse. (The last time I lived with him, he "accidentally" knocked our son into the couch and walked out.) He won't admit he has a problem. Any advice? — DONE FOR GOOD

DEAR DONE: Your husband persists the way he has been because he's trying to wear you down to the point that you will reunite with him. Perhaps you should accept fewer of those phone calls. If there are social workers connected to the shelter you're staying in, consult them about your predicament.

Your husband cannot shirk paying child support. If he doesn't do it voluntarily, his wages can be garnished. While you're at it, reach out to the National Domestic Violence Hotline (800-799-7233) because they may have useful suggestions about how to rid yourself of your abusive, alcoholic husband.

DEAR ABBY: Our only son has moved 2,000 miles away and has no contact with his sisters or me. I know his street address and still have his email address and phone number. About 10 years ago, when I was separated from his father, we were both expressing our angst, and I more than likely negated his feelings in an email. I ran across it the other day, and now realize that it may have caused the rift. Should I bring that up in an apology now, hoping he will accept my most sincere acknowledgment that I ignored his pain? If so, what do I say? I am heartbroken and cannot sleep well with this hanging over my head. — HEARTBROKEN MOM IN TEXAS

DEAR MOM: Write your son and tell him you are trying to understand what has caused the rift between you. Explain that you have been going over things in your mind and found the email from so long ago. Tell him that if this is what caused it, you sincerely apologize, but that you were both going through a difficult time when the email was written, that you love him and hope he will forgive you if it caused him pain.

Justices have shown lack integrity

To the editor:
The events of Friday, in reference to the Supreme Court's overturning of Roe v. Wade, are a very polarizing issue, and rightfully so.

As a male, I personally have no dog in this fight. As a matter of principle I certainly would never wish to be a party to ending an unborn life.

That being said, the real disturbing issue here that's not being addressed is the following.

Letters to the Editor

It's now very apparent that honor and integrity are no longer important to the American people. By definition, the Supreme Court is benched with what is supposed to be the best and brightest legal minds in our entire judicial system.

They are appointed to this lofty position for life.

After going back and watching the replies that the last few gave, under oath, during their confirmation hearings, the conclusion must be drawn that perjuring yourself is acceptable.

Now, the hard-line right and staunch conservatives got the outcome that they wanted over this issue, so it's acceptable.

However, what you or I feel about Roe v. Wade is irrelevant here.

The disconcerting thing is, if it's OK for the justices on the highest court in the land to have such a flippant and lackadaisical disregard for integrity while under oath, then how are we to expect anyone to honor an oath?

This is a crack. No, actually, it is a chasm in the very foundation of our judicial system.

If you got the outcome you wished, so be it. Just be aware that, someday in the future, an issue that you may not be so emotionally blinded by may arise.

If you expect honor and integrity from the bench, in the future, perhaps you will recall that here, on this day, on this issue, it's quite apparent and clear for all to see that it doesn't exist on this court.

That's the truly disturbing conclusion that logically can and must be drawn from this.

Respectfully submitted,

Manufacturing dominates state

By MORTON J. MARCUS

This week, we move deeper in Indiana's economy, down the gross domestic product (GDP) rabbit hole into the sectors of that economy.

Recall, we use the 2019 GDP, the sum of all the goods and services produced in Indiana, because 2020 and 2021 were impacted by the COVID pandemic. We think 2019 is a more reliable picture of our Hoosier economy.

How many economic sectors are in Indiana?

You could say two: The private and the public sectors, if you're thinking of ownership. Or two, goods and services, if you're thinking about material substances versus what people do more directly for you.

We're dividing the economy into 21 sectors and accepting the ambiguity of those sector names.

Eye on the Pie

Together, they're 26% of Hoosier GDP, but separately they reflect many different production processes, logistical needs and environmental challenges ...

Isn't manufacturing the biggest sector in Indiana?

Yes, even when we divide it into durable and non-durable goods. The Bureau of Economic Analysis (BEA) defines durable goods as "tangible products that can be stored or inventoried and that have an average life of at least three years." BEA defines non-durable goods exactly the same, except having an average life of less than three years.

Durable manufacturing accounted for $58.3 billion (15.3%) of Indiana's $381 billion total 2019 GDP. Non-durables were second at $40.9 billion (10.7%). Together, they're 26% of Hoosier GDP, but separately they reflect many different production processes, logistical needs and environmental challenges; that's a discussion for another time.

So health care's next in third place?

No. Health care and social assistance services ranked fifth in Indiana's GDP at $32.4 billion (8.5%).

Then government's in third place?

Local, state and federal governments together, including public colleges and universities, produced $36.5 billion (9.6% of our GDP) good enough for fourth place, but not for third place.

That honor went to real estate, renting and leasing at $39.7 billion (10.4% of Indiana's GDP). Renting and leasing are big businesses involving houses, apartments, offices, cars, tools, earth moving equipment and RVs, not to mention all those real estate agents eager to help you buy or sell your home.

Where's the other 46% of GDP beyond those Big 5?

Surprising to Hoosiers, Indiana's agriculture, forestry, fishing (ranked 20th), plus mining, quarrying, oil and gas extraction (ranked 21st), all together accounted for $4.3 billion, 1.1% of our GDP. That's about tied with arts, entertainment and recreation (ranked 18th), also 1.1% of GDP.

Banking?

Finance and insurance contributed 6% ($23 billion) to GDP to secure sixth place in Indiana.

Retail?

That was $20.2 billion (5.3%), taking eighth place, behind wholesale trade ($22 billion), but leading construction activities ($17 billion).

Transportation and warehousing?

$13.4 billion or 3.5% in 11th place.

Then?

Yes, Hanover, Wabash, DePauw, Notre Dame and other private schools accounted for 1.1% ($4.1 billion) of GDP.

We'll go further into wonderland next week. Pack a lunch.

Hotline provides opportunity

By RYAN K. MCBAIN and STEPHANIE BROOKS HOLLIDAY

Los Angeles Times
Tribune News Service

Today, the 911 system is taken for granted. Anyone, virtually anywhere in the United States, should be able to dial three digits during a physical health emergency and expect a fast, local response — sometimes making the difference between life and death.

On July 16, "988" will become the equivalent hotline for mental health emergencies. The launch will occur two years after Congress passed the National Suicide Designation Act of 2020, leaving the particulars of implementation to individual states. But the change will be a missed opportunity if states can't clear significant hurdles: funding the expanded crisis response system, and making sure people know it's available.

There's a clear need for a hotline tailored to mental health emergencies. Someone dies from suicide in the United States about every 11 minutes, a rate that has increased almost 30% since 2000, according to government statistics. (Suicide is the second-leading cause of death among adolescents and young adults, according to 2019 data.) Another roughly 10 million Americans show up at emergency departments each year with acute mental health needs.

While the National Suicide Prevention Lifeline has served as a resource for those in mental health crisis for more than 15 years, people have to remember a

Ryan K. McBain and Stephanie Brooks Holliday

10-digit number to call it. The three-digit makeover is likely to draw more callers. If it can handle the influx, 988 could divert individuals to services that are more appropriate than emergency rooms or law enforcement agencies. Arizona's crisis response approach has so far shown promise.

Yet this vision for 988 response remains a distant goal in most U.S. communities. A national survey we conducted at Rand Corp. this spring found that many state and county program directors feel unprepared for the 988 rollout. A majority reported they didn't feel they had the staffing, financing or infrastructure needed. Most had not been involved in developing a strategic plan or budget for setting up a 988 system.

The federal law gave states the option of funding 988 through a monthly fee on phone bills, but just a handful have passed legislation to do so. California's bill to levy a capped phone surcharge to finance 988 is waiting in the state Legislature, and the funding the state has pledged to the program so far falls short of the $50 million advocates say is needed for an expected tripling of call volume.

The funding shortages should not come as a shock. The lack of mental health infrastructure and providers in the U.S. has for decades contributed to high rates of homelessness and incarceration among individuals with mental health conditions, as well as rising deaths from suicide, drug overdose and alcohol poisoning. Without rapid reforms to support mental health care in general and 988 in particular, dialing the new line in many parts of the country would force callers to endure long wait times, connect them to someone unfamiliar with nearby services or direct them to overwhelmed hospitals that can't admit new psychiatric patients.

The federal government is increasing its investments to address the lack of services. Congress allocated billions of dollars for mental health through the CARES Act and American Rescue Plan. The Biden administration's 2022 budget included $1.6 billion in block grants for community mental health services. But the need for options such as mental health urgent care centers and community-based residential treatment, as well as employment support, remains enormous.

Long-term funding for 988 will also be crucial to ensure that people actually get access to care. Last year, the current 10-digit suicide hotline fielded about 2 million calls, but an estimated 17% were abandoned before the caller got help.

Another challenge lies in educating the public about 988 and destigmatizing its use. Schools represent a powerful potential avenue for this. At least 20 states and Washington, D.C., include mental health in their curricula. Normalizing use of 988 among students would introduce young people to a service they or their loved ones may continue to need in adulthood. Public campaigns can also spread information about mental health programs widely; the Why We Rise campaign in Los Angeles, for example, has reached diverse racial and ethnic groups.

With mental health program directors around the country saying they don't have the money, staff or plans in place, the most important factor in 988's success will be how government officials and health system administrators respond. The pandemic has heightened awareness of the urgency of mental health care, particularly among parents whose kids have suffered during the pandemic. Given the magnitude of the mental health crisis, 988 should be an opportunity to overhaul not just the phone number but also what happens after it gets dialed. It will take political will and leadership to reach that goal.

Chicago falls to Ohtani, Angels

By LAMOND POPE

Chicago Tribune
Tribune News Service

Tim Anderson and José Abreu singled in the first inning for the Chicago White Sox against Shohei Ohtani.

Anderson reached third and Abreu second on a wild pitch. But the Los Angeles Angels two-way star struck out Gavin Sheets to end the threat.

The Sox had another big opportunity in the fourth, loading the bases. But Ohtani struck out Josh Harrison for the third out. They made Ohtani work but they couldn't cash in Wednesday, falling 4-1 in front of 27,612 at Angel Stadium.

"We didn't put the ball in play enough," Sox manager Tony La Russa said. "That's to their credit. Their pitching was good."

The Sox struck out 15 times as they dropped the rubber match of the three-game series.

"We got it going, just key times they made a pitch and we didn't put it in play," La Russa said.

Wednesday was billed as a showcase pitching matchup between Sox starter Michael Kopech and Ohtani. And both had numbers good enough to win.

"Obviously he's a superstar," Kopech said of Ohtani. "We have to be prepared coming into that on both sides of the ball with a guy like that. And for the most part, I was able to stay in control of that and work counts with him (Ohtani went 0-for-3 with a walk). I might not have been as efficient as I would have liked, but I was able to stay in the driver's seat with him there."

"He did a great job on the mound tonight."

Thwait's tosses perfect inning

COMSTOCK PARK, Michigan — Nick Thwait's tossed a perfect inning.

But by the time he was in the game, it was out of reached.

Thwait's, a 2018 Fort Recovery High School graduate, was the only Fort Wayne TinCaps pitcher who didn't give up multiple runs Wednesday in a 14-4 loss to the host West Michigan Whitecaps.

Fort Wayne fell behind when it gave up four runs in the bottom of the second inning. It pulled to within one with three runs in the top of the fourth, but immediately gave up four more as the game got out of hand. By the time Thwait's entered the game in the eighth inning, the TinCaps were down by 10.

Thwait's induced fly balls from Josh Crouch and Corey Joyce of the Whitecaps, an affiliate of the Detroit Tigers, and got a ground out from Trei Cruz in a one-two-three inning. He threw just 11 pitches.

The outing was the second in the last week for the former Indian after giving up two runs on seven hits and a walk in Saturday's 7-5 loss to the Great Lakes Loons. He had two strikeouts in 3 1/3 innings, which matched his longest outing of the season.

Wednesday's strong effort dropped his ERA to 4.60. He has a 2-3 record in 18 relief appearances and 30 strikeouts in 31 1/3 innings.

Thwait's is in his fourth professional season and his first with Fort Wayne, the high-A affiliate of the San Diego Padres. He posted a 2.42 ERA with 35 strikeouts in 26 innings in Rookie ball in 2018. He was 4-3 with a 4.66 ERA and 47 strikeouts in 58 innings in Class A short-season in 2019 and went 2-10 with a 7.03 ERA and 87 strikeouts in 87 innings a year ago in Class A. (The 2020 season was canceled because of the coronavirus pandemic.)

Carly Trinidad of All Circuit Electrical slides in to home plate just under the tag from Masonic Lodge catcher Calie Yates during the Portland Junior League Major softball championship game Wednesday night. Trinidad had three hits for All Circuit in its 11-2 victory.

Trinidad leads All Circuit

The championship parade started Wednesday in Portland Junior League. All Circuit Electrical took the spot at the front of the line.

With Carly Trinidad leading the way, All Circuit scored three runs in the first inning to take the lead and pulled away late for an 11-2 victory over Masonic Lodge in the Major softball championship game.

In other games Wednesday, The Rock Church picked up wins of 14-1 over Jay County REMC and 19-12 over Portland Optimists in Rookie softball and Matt's Garage defeated Cook's Nursery 16-9 in Rookie baseball.

Trinidad led off the bottom of the first inning with a triple and came around to score along with Kendel Rowles and Hallie Schwieterman for a 3-0 lead. Masonic Lodge pulled to within one with a couple of runs in the top of the fourth inning, but All Circuit responded with four runs in the bottom of the frame with Trinidad and Emily Young each contributing two-out hits. All Circuit scored three more runs in the fifth inning and one in the sixth for the final margin.

Trinidad finished 3-for-4 with a triple and a double while Brena Brewster and Young each added two hits. Hallie Schwieterman and Trinidad handled pitching duties for All Circuit, combining to strike out nine batters.

Brooklynn Bright, who was named Miss Softball after the game, had two hits, including a double, for Masonic Lodge. Nevaeh Armstrong added a double and Calie Yates recorded a single and a run.

Journi Dalrymple racked up two doubles and five singles in leading The Rock to its victories. Ellie Wiggins finished with three singles and a triple against Optimists and Kenzlea Bentz had three singles and a double. Jolee LeMaster added three hits in the opener.

For Matt's Garage, Lexten Dakin drove in three runs with a triple and two singles. Ethan Peterson, Josia Sager, Liam Ride-nour and Duke Armstrong all added three hits. Ashton Conn was 3-for-3 with two doubles and an RBI for Cook's.

Colts release training camp schedule

By GEORGE BREMER
The Herald Bulletin (Anderson)
Tribune News Service

WESTFIELD — Indianapolis Colts training camp returns to Grand Park this summer with a new title sponsor and 16 open practices.

Players report July 26 and practice begins July 27 at noon. Tickets are free but must be obtained in advance at Colts.com.

"We are thrilled to be returning to Westfield and Grand Park for another summer of Colts Training Camp," Indianapolis vice chair and owner Kalen Jackson said in a press release. "After two years of living with strict health protocols, we're so happy this year's training camp will resemble camps of the past when it comes to fan activities and player interaction."

Theme days throughout this year's camp include Kids Day (July 28), Salute to Service Day (Aug. 3), Give Back Sunday (Aug. 7) and Fan Appreciation Day (Aug. 17).

For the first time since 2019, there also will be an evening practice on July 30 at 7 p.m.

Other highlights include joint practices with the Detroit Lions on Aug. 17-18 ahead of the preseason game at Lucas Oil Stadium on Aug. 20 and a 10 a.m. practice on Aug. 25 — the day camp breaks.

The Colts finished 9-8 last season and infamously missed the playoffs after a loss against the Jacksonville Jaguars on the final day of the regular season.

Several changes followed on and off the field, led by the addition of quarterback Matt Ryan, who is slated to become the sixth different Week 1 starter in as many seasons. Indianapolis also added veteran cornerback Stephon Gilmore in free agency and acquired defensive end Yannick Ngakoue in a trade with the Las Vegas Raiders.

Notable departures include quarterback Carson Wentz (Washington Commanders), cornerback Rock Ya-Sin (Raiders) and wide receiver Zach Pascal (Philadelphia Eagles).
