Members discuss water park manager, lifeguards

By RAY COONEY The Commercial Review

Focus is continuing to be placed on preparing for a full season at Portland Water Park.

Portland Park Board members discussed various park issues, mostly involving the water park, at their meeting Tuesday. (Beyond talking about the parks, no official action could be taken because of the lack of a quorum.)

Park board president Brian Ison — he was in attendance with John McFarland, while Michael Brewster and Shauna Runkle were absent — reported at the meeting that Portland City Council approved a change to the city's salary ordinance to set the pay range for the Portland Water Park manager at between $17 and $19 per hour. The previous rate had been $16.89 per hour. "Last meeting we dis-cussed we wanted to lean toward $18 an hour," he said, adding that the range provides flexibility for the hiring process.

He said now that the salary range has been set the job will be posted in an effort to get a water park manager in place well in advance of the planned opening of the facility on Memorial Day weekend.

Ison and McFarland also continued to discuss recruiting lifeguards, noting that the pay range has been set between $13 and $14. Ison again noted that the board was previously leaning toward $14 per hour. (They also noted plans to keep concession stand worker pay at $13 per hour.) McFarland added that March is the target date for lifeguard training courses at Jay County High School. The park board previously approved reimbursing guards for the cost of training if they are hired at Portland Water Park.

Capsule Reports

Three people were injured after an Ohio woman's vehicle crossed the center line and struck a Portland woman's car on U.S 27 in Jay County about 6:20 a.m. Saturday.

Zayra Delatorre, 19, Union City, was driving a 2007 Ford Fusion south on the highway just south of county road 200 South. Elizabeth D. Byrum, 40, was driving her 2007 Honda CR-V north on the same road. According to a Jay County Sheriff's Office report, Delatorre's vehicle crossed the center line of the road and struck Byrum's vehicle, causing it to spin and flip onto its top along the east side of the highway.

Byrum complained of chest pain and her passenger, 15-yearold Griffin Byrum, complained of neck pain. Delatorre also complained of neck pain. They refused treatment at the scene, according to the report.

Delatorre was cited for driving without a valid license. Damage estimated between $25,000 and $50,000.

Intersection crash

A Redkey woman suffered a head injury after a Portland man drove into her vehicle at the intersection of county roads 700 South and 1000 West about 12:55 p.m. Sunday.

Donald E. Ervin, 63, told Jay County Sheriff's Office he was stopped in his 2001 Ford F-150 on county road 1000 West and continued south into the intersection (John Blanton of Redkey, a witness, told police Ervin did not stop at the intersection.) Ervin didn't see the oncoming westbound 2020 Chrysler Pacifica driven by 45-year-old Chastity A. Bland, and he crashed into the van, causing Bland's vehicle to spin into a nearby field.

Bland complained of head pain and was transported to the hospital for her injuries. Ervin was cited with an infraction for failing to yield the right-of-way, according to the report.

Damage is estimated between $10,000 and $25,000. Bland's vehicle was towed.

Continued from page 1 Half of the funds about $100 per student will be reimbursed upon hiring with the other half paid if a lifeguard works at least a 10-week summer schedule.

Other water park items addressed included making sure to have someone ServSafe certified for the concession stand, getting safety equipment inspected before the summer and having an assistant manager/head guard for when the water park manager is not working.

Ison also confirmed with street and parks superintendent Tom Leonhard that the capital projects budget for the parks was increased to $45,000 from the previous $35,000. He suggested discussing priorities for those funds at the board's next meeting.

Among the brought up Tuesday were electrical improvements at Portland Junior the League fields in Weiler-Wilson Park and tearing down a concession stand at Milton Miller Park. Ison asked parks department employee Matt Shauver to seek quotes for the electrical work. Shauver suggested that the Milton Miller concession stand removal can wait until next year.

Ison and McFarland also briefly discussed bringing in an arborist to evaluate trees in the parks, future upkeep needs for the walking trail at Hudson Family Park and extending electrical service to the Hudson park gazebo (and eventually around the entire walking trail).

If you find yourself rubbing your shoulder after reaching up to take a coffee mug off the shelf, hammering in a nail just over your head or climbing into a pickup cab, you're among millions of Americans — particularly those over 60 — with a shoulder issue. Shoulder pain could be a sign of arthritis, tendonitis, a rotator cuff tear or Whatever the cause, you may want to consult with an orthopedic professional. That first meeting will include a health history, physical exam and possibly an X-ray to determine the underlying cause and extent of your shoulder issue. Sometimes additional imaging, such as an MRI, may be needed.

Your orthopedic professional will walk you through treatment options and help you decide what may be the best for you. The first line of treatment can include:

— Doing physical therapy to strengthen the muscles of the shoulder and arm.

Many studies show that peorespond well to these treatments and are able to go about their daily activities. However, if you're still experiencing pain and weakness, your orthopedic professional may recommend surgery.

One cause of pain and weakness is a rotator cuff tear. The rotator cuff is a group of muscles and tendons. It holds the shoulder joint in place and assists in arm motion and strength. If the MRI reveals a tear in the rotator cuff, it may require surgery, although the vast majority don't.

Typically, surgery is outpatient, and you can go home the same day. In this procedure, the surgeon inserts a

After four to six weeks, you may still have some work restrictions and need to modify your activity. Your orthopedic professional also may recommend physical therapy.

Whether you respond to noninvasive treatments or need surgery, your orthopedic professional's goal is to relieve your aching shoulder so you can go about your daily activities without pain or restrictions.

Family continues to honor stepson's help

DEAR ABBY: My dad had a stroke. My siblings and I (there are three of us) needed someone to care for him, since we all work full time. I asked my stepson, "Miles," who was living in Tennessee, if he could help us out by moving to Washington state and caring for Dad during the day (Miles works nights), given that Dad needed 24/7 care. My siblings and I didn't want to put him into a nursing home.

Within two weeks, Miles had given up his life in Tennessee and moved across the country to help. Because he was helping us, we didn't ask him to pay rent. His generosity saved us thousands of dollars in nursing home fees, and Dad was much happier living at home.

Losing lottery was actually a relief

Editor's note: This column is being reprinted from Jan. 12, 2022. Jack's message in this col*umn* — something along the lines of "money does not buy happiness" — seems appropriate again this week as Tuesday's MegaMillions jackpot grew to $1.1 billion.

By JACK RONALD The Commercial Review

other day, and it nearly ruined my weekend.

Ordinarily, I'm not a big customer of the lottery industry. But every once in awhile, when the jackpot reaches stratospheric levels, I'll reach for my wallet and pay what some refer to as "the stupidity tax."

So it was that not long before Christmas, when the Powerball bundle was heading toward $500 million, I took the plunge.

At first, like most lottery ticket buyers, I found myself focusing on the jackpot.

What would I do with that sort

Back in the Saddle

I bought a Powerball ticket the of money? Even after taxes, that's a Scrooge McDuck-sized pile of cash.

The possibilities were nearly endless:

•Travel — post COVID — was on the list.

•So was making sure that our grandchildren's college education was taken care of. We've started 529 plans for all of them, but this would take things to a whole new level.

•And while our kids are doing well, it would be wonderful to assure a meaningful measure of security for their futures.

·Meanwhile, there's a piece of lakefront property in New the daydreams began, misgiv- to roll — it's inevitable that I Hampshire that Connie and I ings materialized: find myself wondering how I have often dreamed of.

Those were just the self-indulgent things on the list. At the same time, there were many good things that could be done on a community level:

•Endowments for Arts Place, John Jay Center for Learning, Jay Community Center, Friends of the Limberlost and Jay County Public Library.

•With that kind of money, I daydreamed, I could be a oneman redevelopment commission, a kind of a force of nature for rescuing local downtowns. The former Stewart Brothers Furniture building would be acquired to become the new home for Dunkirk's library and the Glass Museum. Downtown Portland and downtown Redkey would get serious facelifts. Unencumbered by local politics and second-guessing, I'd go all out.

And then, just as quickly as ·How would that kind of windfall affect my friendships? Would it create a barrier? Would I become the bank of last resort for acquaintances who had fallen on hard times?

·Would we have to move? Would we have to go somewhere that could provide some measure of anonymity?

•How could we help our grandchildren and children without ruining their lives? It's one thing to help, but you don't want to create dependency. No one wants to create a generation of "trust fund babies." At least, I don't.

And finally, just about the time I pulled into the driveway at home, there was something

At this stage in my life — I think it was Garrison Keillor who referred to it as the time when the closing credits begin find myself wondering how I want to be remembered after

I'm gone. For me, the answers were simple. I want to be remembered as a good husband, as a good father, as a good boss, as someone who had an impact on his community and as someone who tried to make a difference in the world. Would I trade all that to be remembered as "the guy who won the Powerball"?

The answer was no.

But I have to say that the question bothered me all weekend. I could feel the lottery ticket in the pocket of my jeans, and for all I knew it was a winner.

So it was a relief Monday to find out that the jackpot was growing and my ticket was just another piece of paper to be recycled.

I don't think I have ever felt

The former college consultant admissions who cooked up a multimillion-dollar scheme to fraudulently admit kids of wealthy clients, including Hollywood celebrities, into elite U.S. colleges was sentenced to 3 1/2 years in prison Wednesday, closing a sordid chapter on the unfair world of university admissions.

William "Rick" Singer, the mastermind of what prosecutors called the nation's largest college admissions fraud, pleaded guilty in 2019 to several charges including racketeering and money launder-Prosecutors sought a six-year sentence, but the judge took into consideration Singer's cooperation with authorities, which enabled them to indict 53 people in the far-reaching case. Among those previously sentenced to jail were actors Lori Loughlin and Felicity Huffman.

Blues" relationships Singer developed with coaches, parents, testing proctors and others to take advantage of the lack of controls in college admissions systems at the University of Southern California, Stanford, Georgetown, UCLA and other universities. During court proceedings, Singer detailed the three "doors" to gain admittance into these colleges: a front door for students taking the proper steps; a back door for those whose parents could donate to a university's endowment; and a side door he created for parents willing to pay six-figure sums for their kids to be admitted as fake athletes.

The scandal highlighted the essential unfairness of college admissions, a highstakes process that unfairly disadvantages students of color and those without resources. Parents with financial resources don't have to break the law to get a leg up. They can choose from an array of pricey services to help their kids that lower-income families can't afford.

And who's to say that there isn't another "consultant" like Singer who's lege.

Tariff is doomed by details

By EUGENE LINDEN Los Angeles Times

Tribune News Service

The European Union just unveiled its plan to impose border taxes on greenhouse gas polluters as part of its effort to become carbon neutral by 2050. In doing so it will become the first major economic bloc to try to enforce good climate behavior, not just on its own industries, but also on those that would sell to the EU.

The bloc does deserve credit for doing a better job at confronting the climate challenge than the U.S. or any other large economic bloc has. The need for action is hair-on-fire obvious. Unfortunately, the EU's action won't work.

More than three decades of local and regional initiatives have shown that a piecemeal approach can't solve a global problem. Concerns are well documented. The EU itself has objected to another recent example of this fragmented approach, accusing the U.S. of unfair subsidies because of elements of the $370-billion climate plan in the Inflation Reduction Act. The U.S. trade representative, Katherine Tai, has also already expressed concern about how the EU's border tax would affect trade with U.S. manufacturers

The EU's plan is also doomed by its complexity, which invites gaming of the system, and by its pace, which is wildly inadequate to the climate crisis facing the planet.

The global community will either have to take measures commensurate with the threat, or our grandchildren will be scrambling for food in a climate the world hasn't seen in a few million years. Plenty of creatures will thrive in a world where temperatures are 2.5 to 3 degrees Celsius above pre-industrial levels, but humans will not be one of them.

Eugene Linden

What might those measures be? Tariffs could be a useful tool in rapidly reducing global emissions, but not if implemented piecemeal, and not if configured the way the EU proposes. I've written before about some design criteria for what an effective climate tariff might look like.

1. The tariffs must be universal. Greenhouse gas emissions now can be monitored at the national level. If all nations have to meet a set target, and we monitor each nation's emissions, we eliminate the free-rider problem that has bedeviled prior agreements. (China was exempted from the Kvoto Protocol and has surged to being the largest emitter on Earth, pouring more greenhouse gasses into the atmosphere than the entire G-20.) If all nations have to meet a set target for reductions, exporters will have an incentive to police bad actors in their own countries, eliminating the incentive, for instance, to shift clean energy to exporting industries while continuing to use dirty fuels for home consumption.

2. Keep it simple. Set a clear target for each country to cut emissions by a certain amount. Then we can let any nation choose the way it wants to reduce emissions. China might meet targets through improving energy efficiency and switching to renewables. Brazil and Indonesia Destruction of Civilizations.'

might instead reduce illegal deforestation, something they should be doing anyway. 3. Whatever we do, we should do it soon. Thirty years after the first efforts to combat climate change, emissions are more than 60% higher than they were in 1990, and last year they rose by nearly 6%. COP27 (27!) came and went without producing anything that will have a discernible, near-term impact on reducing emissions. Clearly, what we've been doing hasn't worked.

Once we have set up simple global tariffs, to take effect immediately, the key becomes enforcement. We humans have already created the international institutions such as the World Trade Organization (which has expressed an institutional interest in dealing with climate change) and a treaty, the Paris agreement, that are needed to enact such a system. The World Bank could be useful as well, as an intermediary to redirect collected tariffs to the poorer nations to help them develop programs to meet targets.

The alternative is the path we're now on: Economic blocs and nations going their own way, slowly and ineffectually. The EU border carbon tax may be the first such effort, but it won't be the last. This piecemeal approach will inevitably inspire retaliatory polices from outside the bloc. Just maybe, the prospect of a cascade of border taxes, carbon tariffs and other national and regional measures will be sufficient to scare the global community into the concerted collective action our planet so clearly needs.

The Department of Natural Resources will spend the last $29.5 million from its $150 million Next Level Trails program on acquisition and development costs for the 62-mile rail corridor, will span five counties in Southern Indiana, and lay within 10 miles of about 440,000 Hoosiers.

The Monon South Trail will preserve a piece of our Hoosier history while promoting quality of place in our rural communities," Holcomb said in a news release Tuesday. In his speech, he also asked lawmakers to approve $50 million more in trails funding, plus $25 million for a land conservation program.

Holcomb also took the chance to talk about the legislative priorities he released last week, making his case in front of the lawmakers who control the state's purse strings.

He acknowledged the state's woeful public health standings for smoking, obesity, mental health care access and childhood vaccinations — 45th, 46th, 43rd and 41st, respectively — and reiterated an ask for major investments in public health: $347 over the course of the next two-year budget.

Willing local governments would have to pony up funds for the 80-20 state-local mix.

We don't have a day or a dollar – certainly not a life - to waste," Holcomb told legislators, "so taking the next four months [of the legislative session] to get this right: nothing could be more important.'

additional investments [are] needed. But key to that, he said, is tracking the outcomes of those investments using "metrics for success."

The governor also asked lawmakers to prioritize education, asking Monon South Trail, Holcomb for an increase of $1.1 billion announced. The trail, along a former toward K-12 tuition support and an additional $120 million to pay for textbooks and curriculum material.

Indiana is one of just seven states in which public school students' families shoulder the cost of textbooks and other curriculum materials — which Holcomb dubbed a "disguised tax.

Senate President Pro Tempore Rodric Bray was unenthusiastic about the proposal in comments to media after Holcomb's speech. He acknowledged that "public education is super important" but said the caucus would have to discuss "whether or not we can get to that with the textbooks.

Huston, meanwhile, emphasized using education dollars effectively as he sidestepped a question about Holcomb calling textbook fees a hidden tax.

We're just working through the mechanics of it all and thinking about the best way to do it," he told reporters.

Democrats have long supported further investments in education, including free curriculum materials at public schools — but recognized the governor's prioritization of it and other education proposals isn't a free ride to success.

Senate Minority Leader Greg Tay-House Speaker Todd Huston said lor told reporters that, as in 2020, he his caucus members "recognize that found himself in the "interesting position" of "supporting a lot of the projects that the governor wants to do, while his own political party and colleagues are questioning whether or not we should do certain things.'

"I think he's got a long way to go to get my colleagues on the other side of the aisle to support it," Taylor said of Holcomb's id

Holcomb also called on lawmakers to focus on public safety by boosting money for school safety grants, court technology upgrades, "true" statewide firefighting training system, state police pay and more.

"Here in Indiana, we have a wellrun, soundly financed state - and the word is out!" Holcomb said. "... Investors are giving us their vote of confidence. They're creating industries and careers here. They see their growth and future here. Let's prove them right!"

But Democrats were skeptical of what they framed as a business-first approach.

"I'm not sure [the AAA credit rating] really means so much to Hoosiers," Sen. Shelli Yoder, D-Bloomington, told reporters. "When it comes to that AAA rating, Hoosiers are trying to put food on the table, pay their bills, find affordable housing and afford childcare.'

'We're saying from the Democrat policy standpoint, it's time to take a look at households and not just businesses," Taylor said.

Continued from page 8 "We've set back offensive basketball about 20 years," he added. "It's unbelievable what we do at times.

"And then we came out at halftime ... and we got into it, got a few buckets early. And then again, we hit a lull ...

The victory was the first for Heritage coach Adam Gray, a 2009 JCHS graduate, at his alma mater. His squads had lost 47-37 at Jay County in 2020 and 67-36 last season.

"It's special," said Gray, whose team halted a three-game losing streak. "This place is still special to me, still special to my family. Obviously my parents spent a lot of years here in this school sys-

His dad Butch was a teacher and coach while his mom Linda was secretary/treasurer at Jay County High School.

"It's a special place to us," he added. "And we're rooting for them every time except when we play them.

Heritage (7-4) advances to play Adams Central (4-4) — the Jets topped South Adams 82-30 in Tuesday's opening round — in the ACAC Tournament semifinal at 6 p.m. Friday at Jay County.

Meyer, who had opened the fourth-quarter scoring with a 3pointer, hit a triple from the left corner on an assist from Nyles Knapke to pull his team within two with 47 seconds remaining.

After Josh Dowlen missed the front end of a one-and-one opportunity, Heritage went hunting for a shot to tie the game or take the lead. The school's all-time leading scorer, Luke Saylor, got the ball in the right corner and tossed a cross-court pass to Knapke, who quickly kicked it to Meyer on the left wing. Meyer knocked down his second triple of the final minute, leading to a Jay County timeout with 16 seconds to go.

ty of times," said Gray. "We kept saying that the lid was going to come off. Especially to Kobe. He's a kid who, when's confident, he can fill it up pretty quickly. ... For him to hit the three to pull us within two and then to hit the goahead, that's a testament to that kid's toughness."

JCHS had plenty of time to hunt for a final shot, first getting the ball to Dusty Pearson in the paint. When he was doubleteamed, he passed out to Abraham Dirksen, whose drive was stopped and he passed back out to Blake Bogenschutz. With time ticking away, Bogenschutz, who finished with nine points, was left to try a long jumper that was "We've seen it in practice plen- partially blocked and the ball bounced around until time expired.

They doubled," said Bomholt, who said the play called for avoiding the double-team and feeding the ball in to Bennett Weitzel on the opposite block. "All we had to do was make the guard-to-guard pass and enter it on the other side. We didn't. We forced it in there. ... And then we ended up having to force a shot up. That's not what we set up at all.

"So we didn't get execution on either end. And in a game that comes down to one possession, you can't do that. You can't not

YORKTOWN — The Patriots diving, with Maddy Snow takkept the meet close.

But with only three wins, they couldn't pull off a victory. Jay County High School's swim teams lost Tuesday to the host Yorktown Tigers by a combined 225-134.

The only contested victories for the Patriots both came in the 100-yard breaststroke. Mara Bader won the girls race by more than four seconds in 12 minutes, 12.26 seconds while Josh Monroe took the top spot in the boys race with a time of ing first place with 184.5 points.

Bader was also the runner-up in the 200 individual medley and Monroe finished second in the 500 freestyle.

Adding runner-up finishes for the girls team, which dropped to 8-3, were Morgan DeHoff in the 50 freestyle and 100 butterfly, Lauren Fisher in the 100 freestyle, Kenzie Huey in the 100 backstroke and Aubrey Millspaugh in the 500 freestyle.

Wyatt Kunkler placed second in the 50 freestyle for the boys

Girls

Continued from page 8 Tuesday's tournament opener was never in doubt as Jay County scored the game's first nine points — the first four from Gabi Bilbrey followed by a 2pointer and a 3-pointer by Renna Schwieterman.

Heritage got a hoop from Ava Pilon at the 5:58 mark, but JCHS went on to score the next 10 points to already put the game essentially out of reach.

The host Patriots were up 30-11 at the end of the first quarter and pushed their advantage to 46-13 at halftime. They scored the first 16 points of the second half for a 32-0 run overall that spanned about 13 minutes. Comer cleared his bench with a minute to go in the third quar-

Bella Denton (two assists, one rebound), Cassie Petro (four rebounds), Meredith Dirksen (two points, two assists, one rebound). Danielle May (two points, one rebound) and Natalie Carreno (two points, one rebound, one block) all saw significant minutes off the bench for JCHS.

"I thought Bella and Cassie both came in and did a good job," said Comer. "Bella's been doing a really good job when she comes in. She got extended minutes the other night at Bluffton. I think both of them are growing as players.

Tournament split

Victory slips away from JC boys

By RAY COONEY

The Commercial Review Points were just as difficult to come by as they have been for most of the season. The host Patriots didn't score at all in the second quarter.

And yet, they were there — up by five as the clock ticked past the oneminute mark, their opponent passing the ball around the arc trying to find a hole in their zone defense.

In the final 50 seconds, it all slipped away.

Heritage High School's Kobe Meyer hit consecutive 3-pointers — the second with 18.5 seconds left — and Jay County did not get a good look at the basket on its final possession, settling for a deep jumper in a 29-28 loss Tuesday in the opening round of the Allen County Athletic Conference boys basketball tournament.

JCHS coach Jerry Bomholt said the game was lost in the second quarter, when his team shot 0-for-5 and failed to score a point.

With 15 straight wins — nine by 20 points or more — Jay County hasn't been pushed a lot since its lone loss to Hamilton Heights.

In those blowout situations, it can be difficult to maintain a high level of play.

fourth-ranked team in the state didn't have that problem Tuesday.

Jay County High School's girls basketball team poured in 30 firstquarter points and closed the first half on a 16-0 run as it blasted Heritage 74-20 in the opening round of the Allen County Athletic Conference girls basketball tournament.

"We're not normally a pressing team, but we came out pressing trying to get a quick start," said JCHS coach Kirk Comer, whose team climbed to fourth in Monday's Class 3A poll after sitting in the No. 5 spot for several weeks. "We did a really good job ... played with a its gym.) lot of intensity ...

"This is one of our best all-around games. We didn't turn the ball over much. We rebounded well. She shot well. We shot the free throws well. ... We almost had five in double figures. "We didn't relax when we got the lead like other games ... They just came out like they were on a mission tonight. Hopefully we can continue to build on this, because that's the way we need to play come tournament time, with that intensity.'

Jay County (16-1) advances to play South Adams (10-8) in the semifinal after the Starfires knocked off Adams Central 50-48 in Tuesday's opening round. The Patriots won the regularseason game between the two teams, pulling away for a 56-36 victory after being up by just three late in the first half.

By virtue of the South Adams victory, the game will be played at Jay County. (SAHS can't host the game because of recent water damage to
